100 Club

Why is DHST campaigning for shares for its investment in the Club?

In the past supporters groups at a number of clubs around the country have given sums of money to those managing the football club, without receiving anything in return. They have done this out of love for the club. Later they have found themselves ignored. DHST does not want to end up in the situation and so if it does put money into the club, it will ensure that it gets something concrete, ideally shares, shares in return. Shares bind the Trust, the club and the community together. Organisations come and go, but DHST is here not just for this generation of fans, but also the next. One of the reasons it will last is because it has shares and will pass these to the next generation of supporters who in turn will be guaranteed a voice in the club.

Are the current owners going to receive money from the 100 club?

No. DHST is campaigning for a new issue of shares for its investment, rather than purchasing existing shares of individual owners.

What is a 'new share issue', and how is it different from buying up existing shares?

A 'new share issue' means that you purchase shares from the club, and not existing shareholders. The advantage of a new share issue is that the money goes into the club and appears in the accounts, as opposed to going into an individual's pockets as a private transaction.

How will DHST ensure that it gets a fair return for its investment?

DHST will only pass money to the Club when it is satisfied with the terms negotiated.

Will DHST have a say in the spending of the money?

Ideally, we would like to ring-fence the money for the manager to sign a player on contract, but we will agree terms with the club on how this is spent.

How will the spending of this be regulated?

DHST have a representative on the Football Committee who oversees the spending of the money, and the investment will appear in the annual accounts of the football club.

Will members have an opportunity to vote on recommendations for spending the money?

DHST will consult its members through its newsletter and fans' forums planned for next season where participants will be able to have their say.

What will happen if DHST is unable to negotiate satisfactory return with the club?

The money raised will be held by DHST until an agreement on return is reached with the club. If no agreement is reached within 12 months, DHST will call a meeting with all contributors to consult on how to use the money and to agree the future of the 100 Club.

How long do I have to commit to my payments to the 100 Club?

We would like participants to commit for a season, but there is no legal requirement here.

What is the minimum payment?

Under the legislation governing the 100 Club, we must allow contributions as low as £1 a month, but we hope that most members will contribute at least £10.

Can fans less than 16 years of age join?

No, legally this is not possible.

If I want to stop my payments to the 100 Club, how do I do this?

Simply stop the standing order, and inform DHST, so we can update our records.

Is there a penalty for pulling out of the scheme? No.
